San Pedro Arts &

Cultural District

An artist community juxtaposed with industry, against the backdrop of the Pacific Ocean.

The San Pedro Arts & Cultural District's peninsula geography lends a small town atmosphere despite belonging to the nation's second largest city. The historic core of downtown San Pedro has been renting to artists since 1944, with studios in storefronts and warehouses alike. These nontraditional spaces offer regular arts events, with monthly art openings and classes in settings all over the district. New ventures, such as the rise of the San Pedro Public Market, upcoming business and future residential developments, bring waves of inspiration, innovation, and excitement to the community.
